Experience Pays: Harris & Harris Gets Big Settlement Against Distracted Driver

Imagine you are driving home at the end of your day. It is still light out, but you are driving carefully along your regular route. As you pass through an intersection close to home, you suddenly see a big car careening toward you through a stop sign. You don't remember what happens next, but you vaguely recall the smell of gasoline, the sound of sirens, and people yelling as you are suspended upside down by your seatbelt. You know you are hurt, but you are in shock and don't know how to get out. Emergency help arrives and you are removed from your car and rushed to the hospital. All the while, your husband and kids are at home beginning to wonder why you are taking so long to get there. Instead of having a welcoming dinner with your family and chatting about your day, you are being admitted to a hospital trauma unit and your life will never be the same.

I wish I could tell you this is just a story, but it isn't. This is what actually happened to one recent Harris & Harris client. After she was stabilized in the hospital, our client learned that the accident was caused by a driver who was speeding, not paying attention, and just didn't notice the stop sign. I wish I could tell you this doesn't happen every day — but it does.

Even though she was severely injured after the accident, our client started getting calls from the insurance company almost immediately. The adjuster wanted to discuss her injuries and how she was feeling even though she told him she had been given heavy medications and didn't want to talk. She was overwhelmed and concerned she would be taken advantage of in her

Personal Injury Reminder: Act Fast If You Have An Injury Claim

If you've been in an accident and are considering making a claim, be sure to get legal help as soon as possible. If you wait too long to make your claim, the legal deadline for making it may expire. Also, the longer you wait after the accident the more it could hurt your case, as it can get harder to find witnesses and evidence as time goes on.

injured state. More importantly, she wanted to focus on her recovery so she could get back to her regular life. She and her husband contacted Harris & Harris Lawyers right away. We came to their home, listened to her story, and explained that Harris & Harris could handle her entire case from beginning to end. She wouldn't have to talk to the insurance company about her injuries again and we would make sure she received the medical care she needed right away.

She made the right choice. The insurance company soon made it clear they had no intention of paying a fair amount without a fight. Despite the clear liability of the negligent driver who caused the accident, the insurance company refused to pay. Because Harris & Harris Lawyers were personally involved from the start, we wasted no time filing a lawsuit against the negligent driver. While our client focused on her recovery, we worked hard to prove her case and secure a 1.5 million dollar settlement without our client ever going to court. Although her injuries took some time to heal, the right medical care and financial support helped our client get her life back.

Unfortunately, negligent drivers are everywhere. The task of recovering after a serious injury can seem overwhelming. Having a dedicated and experienced attorney on your team can make the difference in getting your life back as quickly as possible. At Harris & Harris Lawyers, we get to know our clients personally and we take their injuries personally. We put the time and effort into each case to get the
